IV.
MR. LOWE has put the case very strongly as against the colonies in reference to their claims for Imperial defence, and asks—where is the justice of the Dorsetshire labourer being asked to contribute to the defence of the inhabitants of Australia. Such modes of presenting the question are likely to be attended with extremely disastrous results. The Dorsetshire labourer is not a subject of Dorsetshire labourer lives under a general political system which may impose upon him an unfair share of the public burdens, but it will end in nothing but his being asked to seek redress by the renunciation of his right to the protection of the British flag.

The great point which appears to be debatable is not the propriety of the colonies doing something towards their own defence, but whether a small number of the colonies are entitled to the defence of an infant society whose defence must be as expensive at the present moment as when one hundred times more numerous, and then, whether the colonies are of so little importance to the parent state as to require the preliminary expenses. No, no, it may be answered—the British Government has thrown off all direct interference in colonial administration, and that with this state of things the obligation is thrown upon the colonies. But this reasoning is in the same circle and returning to the same point, viz.—whether the colonies are really worth preserving: If the parent state has fallen into a great political error, and resigned a power which it ought to have retained, it is hardly to be expected that the renunciation of defence be taken as an act of vengeance, the obligation is not weakened by an Imperial blunder, and which to a large portion of the colonies is a source of constant irritation.

The general conclusions with respect to the defence of the colonies meet every when they are brought to analysis, and every individual case is stated by itself. For example, it will hardly be contended that to the Cape of Good Hope, and yet the military cost at the Cape was on the 31st March, 1862, £435,658, while the cost of New South Wales was only £443,039, the cost of Victoria was £1,000,000, and the cost of the troops employed in New South Wales were 645. The troops in Tasmania were 326, and the cost to the British Government £35,113. The cause, though not apparent upon the schedule, is perfectly known to every colonial legislator, and the question was continued until

* Report of the Committee of the House of Commons on the Colonies. Military expenditure.

For seven years he was a member of the Legislative Council, and afterwards of the Council of Colonial Secretary in its first responsible Ministry, and was subsequently Treasurer and Vice-President of the Executive Council. During his tenure of office in the Department proposed contributions by the colonies towards the cost of the defence of the colony, the expenses of protecting the colony, so far as the land forces were concerned, should be borne half by the Home Government and half by the colony—the colony to provide the personnel, and the Home Government to agree to erect and arm the forts to be built for the defence, and £68,000 were disbursed for that purpose, the whole of the cost of the fortifications having been paid by the colony from the beginning. When the Government proposed that the whole of the pay was made to the colonial ships simultaneously with the rise in the salaries of officers in the civil service, and when the salary of the Governor-General was raised from £5000 to £7000 per annum.

When the Government proposed to remove the colony during the Indian Mutiny, in 1858, the Governor expressed a desire to remove the Artillery, with their field guns, and to make contributions out of the colony towards the pay of the units and horses, but the Legislature by a majority objected to the removal of the company. They had paid the whole pay of these men, and the expense of their importation, and there was no other drilled body of artillery in the colony. The Government, however, were not prepared to allow the colonists as might desire to become artillerymen. The colony was of opinion that, notwithstanding the great of these colonies are the people of England prepared to relinquish, or which will be disposed to surrender to the claims of the natives? Is it a rule for the most part alien? Or, what difficulty would there exist in finding some foreign Power willing to relieve the British Government of the military charge, to enjoy the commercial connection, national honour, and the credit of the colonies?

When, however, we go to the Australian colonies and exclude, as we have a right to do, Tasmanian from the reckoning, the sum total of the imperial contribution to the maintenance of the military establishment from the Australian colonies of £113,088, in these colonies only that could be charged with any degree of fairness with the military cost of their protection. Almost every other colony stands in some relation to the mother country, and occupies an important strategical position.

If, however, the system of imperial desertion were to be adopted to exempt the imperial exchequer, the colonies would lack in the place of empire the element which makes it an empire.

How, then, are we to account for the gratuitous absurdities which France is spending her wealth in the subjugation of Africa, in the formation of a chain of colonies in the Southern Ocean, and in her domination in Syria as in the horoscope of destiny?

The next thing that strikes us on reading the evidence is the flippancy tone in which the colonies are described as political encumbrances. This has been the case in the Quarterly Review, in the Edinburgh Review, in the London Times, published during the rebellion, which showed, probably with some correctness, that the maintenance of the Indian empire was the expense of the Government, and that we were bound to it rather by moral obligation than political interest. Some time afterwards an article appeared in the same Journal, referring to the Hawaiian Islands, when the resignation of those dependencies was suggested, and the article concluded that they were worthless. We have shown above how the same sentiment is expressed with regard to the colonies of Australia. In short, there seems to be a general topic, and a subject which has amused the amusement of all other countries, and has captivated to England as the great. She is told that we are customers to her shop only because it is the cheapest, that the dealings of colonies and the dealings of the mother country are governed by mercantile principles, and must be settled only upon mercantile calculations.

Another statement which we find prominent in the Quarterly Review is, that other nations have made money out of colonies, and that we have not. It is a curious course they would hardly depend upon goods so remote as the common empire. Thus, no doubt, tribute was paid by the Roman citizens to furnish him with shovels and axes, and the Roman citizens of the Colonies would be furnished with shovels and axes, or, as they would say, they would destroy each other, or be devoured by wild beasts. The case, however, which seems to the quantity of gold received by escort from the Lachlan still continues very much in excess of that received from the other rivers; and public attention is consequently being turned towards the Lachlan, and towards other localities. Our Special Commissioner has again visited the Lachlan, and his last report is so very fully with the prospects and condition of a rich gold-field, that we quote it here in its entirety.

April 9.—To those unaccustomed to gold-fields, and to townships that so rapidly spring into existence on the Lachlan, this place would appear a marvel. The extent of the main claim is about 100 acres. In two months, the number and class of buildings that have been erected, the numbers still being erected, would shed those unacquainted with gold-fields to believe that this was a place where the building of large townships in out-of-the-way places had been going on. It appears to be to get frontages, and erect shops, houses, hotels, theatres, shooting and bowling saloons, and every other class of buildings; frontages to the main claim, and to the new claim on the right (the Crown property), selling at from £2 to £3 per acre—a system of speculation in land, and shares in companies, being carried to an extent that would not be believed in by those who have not been to the gold-field, and have not an opportunity of seeing the place. There are, however, diggers, storekeepers, or traders, as, are, as it were, affected with a mania for holding shares in the various leads reported daily to have been discovered. The excitement of gold, and the finding of nuggets, the enthusiasm of the parties in the golden claims, all tend to keep the excitement at the highest pitch, and in too many instances carry away the judgment of the parties. No class of circumstances here are to be engaged except on speculation—viz., that they are allowed two hours daily to shepherd their various claims. Hundreds of men are engaged, and hundreds are receiving 30s. per week for the same. The same is the case with the other, at least one week, and enquiring for differences, and almost universal answer I got was, that Mr. Sodd-so was shepherding on the South lead; another the North, another on the Caledonian, another on the Lachlan, another on the River, and so on. On a party expecting to get a "snack" after my journey, I found my friend, who did not happen to be shepherding, apologised for not being able to give me anything to eat, and did not feel at liberty to accept of my hospitality—that he could only engage one on the condition that after he put breakfast on the table he was allowed until twelve o'clock to shepherd. You hear shepherds at night talk about what they expect to get out of their claims, and you are told that, that such a claim got or expected to get, how one might claim for £50 and would not take £600 for the same. I offered—ounces of gold seldom being mentioned, but the value of claims being the right of it. I offered the large amount of gold claims forwarded to Sydney (upwards of 50,000 ounces, to this date) been obtained, many will ask. The answer is, out of the ground opened; for more than nine-tenths of it is a bona fide claim, and the balance is a speculation, and out of the block claims at first opened and now rarely worked out. On the south end, or continuation of this main lead, now on the frontage systems, I had heard of claims, having been made, and a claim No. 74 having struck gold about ten days ago, and reports say equal to any yet discovered. The claims up to No. 100 are now working, and there is no want of confidence in the continuation of the gold field, and in fact the gold field is at a favourable price. So that, judging from present appearances, there is now a greater extent of ground tested, and proved to be equally rich as the first ground, and the ground opened up in the last few months. That months to come this ground will yield an amount of gold equal to that already produced upon this field. At the north end of this main lead, some of the old block claims that were deserted by the diggers, and taken up by the Government, are being obtained; but at this end the gold more scattered, and interspersed with quartz. The present they have not succeeded in striking gold on the north frontage claims, although they are still being worked. The north end of this main lead, is now sinking; it is nearly 300 feet deep, and great reefs are ascertained that gold will be struck. But reefs is a peculiarity about this field that seems to reverse the usual experience of the diggers, and the water-worn drift is obtained, and is no instance at present on this field has payable gold been found in the lead of drift; the wash dirt in the first lead being

THE ALBERT MONUMENT.

MAINTAINING continue to be held in aid of the colony in aid of the project for erecting a statue to the memory of Prince Albert, and a very general sympathy towards the object has been expressed.

The following circular has been addressed by the Chairman of the Prince Consort's Statue Association, inviting the co-operation of the colonists:—

"Sir,—I am directed by the trustees of the above association—who have undertaken to receive and expend the funds which may be contributed to their cause, for the erection of a statue in this metropolis to the memory of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort—to solicit your co-operation and co-operation.

It would be a waste of words to insist on the claims of the Prince Consort to our veneration or the right of the Queen to our loyal sympathy under her benevolence. For more than twenty years the names of Victoria and Albert have been repeated in every colonial home, as expressing the plenitude of human greatness, happiness, and virtue. These names will be united no longer as a memory of the past. All that now remains to us is to erect a statue to the memory of the Prince who, after commanding throughout his career the admiration of all civilized nations, has gone down to the ages to be remembered as the greatest of his race.

The trustees are most anxious that a prominent share in the task confided to their direction should be accepted by our colonial youth. It is they who are the pillars of the Prince overshadowed the dwelling of their parents, as with a great domestic sorrow. They will read the structure of the statue, the universal judgment of mankind, and the moral character of the Prince, as the monument which imparts such grandeur to his calm and untroubled life. They will take upon their charge the monument to be erected to his memory as a nation, and they will explain its purpose when committing it to the care of the generations to come.

The trustees are most anxious that this tribute to the memory of the deceased Prince be intended as an expression of affectionate devotion with our widowed Queen. There is reason to believe that she will welcome the tokens of regard from one so dear to her as the Queen Victoria, and that the distance of the colony from the centre of the Empire will give to the memorial a special significance. It is a proof that the Queen Victoria, even to the uttermost part of her dominions, not only the allegiance but the warmest affection and love of her people.

The trustees are most anxious that at the earliest moment practicable, you will convene those residing in your neighbourhood, who may be likely to concert in these sentiments, and to elect a committee of members of the community. Informing them of the object of the circular, you will, perhaps, suggest that they should constitute local committees, including ladies as well as gentlemen. By such concerted action every part of your district will have an opportunity of joining in a movement which seeks the concurrence of numbers while dispensing with large contributions of money, and thus making an effort to the full realization of the object contemplated.

Should any unforeseen cause prevent your assistance, I am directed to point out that you are requested to send in your vicinity who might feel disposed to take the initiative steps now suggested for your consideration.

I am, Sir, &c., &c., DEAN THOMSON, Chairman.

THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1862.

by Mr. Sub-Inspector Huxley from Raymond Terrace, who was to follow the coast to Port Stephens, and who went the same day, the vessel was observed yesterday, about ten miles away, the remains of a vessel firmly imbedded in the top of her pointed green, with a white rudder. He did not remark there on Tuesday, but on Wednesday he noticed the vessel to the belief that the wreck is one that was some twelve months back, and might have got covered with the sand which had been washed off the vessel in the last three days by the strong surf breaking upon the shore. The report of the mounted trooper will be made from Raymond Terrace. —Newcastle Chronicle of Saturday, 12th April.

MONTHLY COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

Since our last Summary the Money Market has remained easy

MINERS' ADVOCATE, a Bi-weekly Journal, to be published on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

overspread upon the banks of the Lachlan River and its deposits, whose extent and richness is attested by the fact that the formation of the great Australian gold-fields, has naturally attracted a vast population, and that, relatively brief space of time, from the surrounding country, a permanent colony has been established. The unexplored and unexploited gold-fields, which are so numerous, must necessarily be susceptible of improvement in everything connected with the mineral and agricultural wealth of the country. The interests must require ample means both of capital and of advocacy, it has been resolved to establish a journal at the Townships of Murrumbidgee and Murrumbidgee. THE LACHLAN RIVER AND MURUMBIDGEE

THE object in the establishment of the LACHLAN RIVER is to supply the universally expressed want of a journal upon the Lachlan Diggings—a step which is necessary upon the invitation and promises of support from every class, calling, and profession. To aid in the development of the unbounded resources of the Lachlan River, it is necessary that measures are calculated to promote that object, and to advance the general interest of the community. The journal is intended to be a medium of communication, by demanding for them unfettered freedom and asking for the removal of such restraints as are intended to impede their progress, are leading to the establishment of the LACHLAN RIVER and MURUMBIDGEE.

—the improvement of roads and construction of the means of improved transit and important to the constructive will of the number among the leaders of discussion and agitation.

Parts of the OBERVIER will be devoted to the (a) financial and industrial progress of the country, and for an elective Upper Chamber; and secondly, during such a diffusion of the blessings of education and the establishment of a more equitable social order, in accordance with the Constitution has invested him and the public advantage. "The greatest good for the greatest number," is a political maxim which has been the motto of the wise statesmen of all ages. In proportion as it has been engrained upon the legislatures and communities, they have advanced in the material and moral and political progress of the country. In the advocacy and discussion of all such measures, therefore, the LACHIAN OBERVIER will be by its position.

In pursuing the policy thus shadowed forth, the work of the OBERVIER will be open to the promulgation of the principles which are the basis of the new Republic, and respect for the laws provided at the questions are argued upon their merits, and from personality as the nature of the cases will require, and for the liberal and fair will be made in usually devoted to correspondence.

Questions will be discussed in a frank and out-will be dictated by a candid and impartial spirit. In the exposure of local abuses and suggestion of local improve-permanency of the Leachian Diggings is a question which exists little difference of opinion, an opportunity will be taken for advocating the establishment of the Leachian Diggings as a public necessity for the administration of justice in the higher department of the town as a public necessity will also, as a quarry, be employed in the metropolis and in the towns of the neighbouring districts, and copious from the colonial journals will be given so as to be of service to the public mind. A competent editorial and reporting staff employed, in order that ample justice may be done to the merits of a public cause, and that the Journal will be a supply of Mining arrangements will be made to obtain information from the most reliable sources. Every effort will be made to furnish the public with domestic news, as also condensed reports of the proceedings of the Local Courts; and in this as in every other department strictly restrained to the facts of the geographical arrangements of the paper the best newspaper letter press will be copied. Display in the advertisement department will be given to the economy to the advertiser, and in order to allow space for general intelligence.

WILTON, proprietors,
E. TYLER, agent; Sydney, R. GERVILLE,

PREFACE of a New Religious Periodical, to be called THE CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE, and to be edited by the Rev. J. W. WILSON, M.A., is soliciting the patronage of the public for a new periodical, it is taken for granted that there exists a public mind, a religious mind, a mind that is anxious to be instructed, and a mind that is anxious to be comforted. There is such a want, and whether the want is for a new magazine is left to the public to decide. It is not to be supposed that the magazine is to supply it. It is to be answered by the measure of support it receives.

It is to be seen that it is chiefly intended for the Christian body; it will not, however, be the organ of a particular denomination, but of the Christian body as a whole. It will not be a periodical of the standards and disciplines recognized that form of Church government, the one for the other, but of the Christian body as a whole.
